SATURDAY'S SERMONETTE.

Go to Church Regularly Because:

First: The Christian principles taught there are the same principles which for generations have been the foundation of every permanent benefit to individuals.

Second: Character and integrity are fundamental to a happy existence. The church develops these qualities in human nature. If you possess them now, set a good example for your less fortunate neighbor.

Third: Your children are future citizens. Let the church instill religious truths into their young minds, thus protecting them from within against the wrongs of an oft-time wicked world.

Preach. Go to Church. Practice.

House of Mercy

Klingie Road and Rosemont Ave. N.W.

"Blessed are the merciful for they shall obtain mercy."

Amidst very beautiful surroundings and near one entrance to Rock Creek Park there stands on a sandy knoll, the House of Mercy. This home for the care and training of unfortunate girls was established in 1884 by the Episcopal Diocese in Washington. Its present director is Bishop Alfred Harding, president of a board of nine trustees. In more direct contact with the operation of the home is a board of lady managers whose president is Mrs. Henry B. Brown. Complete supervision of all house activities is entrusted to Deaconess Lillian M. Yeo. For several years she has devotedly performed the duties demanded of one who undertakes to care for those whom the world has perhaps treated unjustly.

Within the House of Mercy are twenty-four girls. Many of these were rescued from environments which had cost them their own happiness and which might later have taken their lives, else reduced them to the sordid existence of unfortunates who seek the underworld for want of better shelter. Not inherently wrong but as victims of unfair treatment which may cross the path of every human somewhere along life's way, these girls have transgressed recognized standards unwittingly. Removed from a dark world which knows no sympathy, they have found within the House of Mercy life, love and understanding. These coupled with training which demands their thoughtful attention, complete the requisites for a new beginning, a new lease on life, a more happy and peaceful outlook.

At the House of Mercy Deaconess Yeo insists upon regularity. There are hours for work, religious instruction and for play. The day's activities close with Chapel services. These are conducted by Rev. George F. Dudley every evening at 8:30.

Each girl during her stay attends for three month periods to the necessary work in the laundry, the kitchen, the garden, and to the details of general housework respectively. The maximum length of stay is two years, for it is considered and has been proved that thorough and consistent training for that length of time will enable any normal person to cope with the world and meet the varying demands of everyday life with credit to oneself. After that time, however, the House of Mercy helps those who have benefited by its care to re-establish themselves in private homes and then keeps up a certain interest in each case by correspondence. Mothers when able may take their children with them; in any case the House of Mercy places a child elsewhere after it has reached the age of five years. It is to these youngsters that we must look for the most positive evidence of the value of clean, wholesome environment. Their baby expressions reflect somewhat a handicap in life, but at the age of 3 or 4 years, after months of proper care and attention to their needs, the youngsters are bright, happy, and ready to enter life's race as normal children. Surely there is no charity more worthy of a helping hand. The world need never hesitate in welcoming such as these. Seventy per cent of the girls who have left this home have made good either in establishing homes of their own or in the business world. Christ provided for this centuries ago when he forgave us and said: "Go, and sin no more."

The Episcopal churches in Washington maintain this home. Donations and gifts from individuals of all denominations are welcome. The House of Mercy performs a very great service in Washington; it accomplishes its mission most creditably.

WILL YOU BE TOO BUSY?

There is nothing more inspiring in the life of the Nation's Capital than the large numbers of government workers who work hard all day and go to school at night in order to lay broad foundations for success in life.

But some day the angel of death is destined to beckon each of us to close the book of life and go hence. When that day dawns will the great entry be missing, which shows that you have not neglected your duties to Christ's church, because you have been too busy to write it in?

Lay this thought upon your heart in your youth and you will have no regrets in your age.
